Reconciliation from an Indigenous Perspective By Herman Michell	Within this book, Chapters 1 to 5 focus on reconciliation as a series of connections beginning with the land, and then moving outward to include the individual and then families, communities, and society. From a visual perspective reconciliation is very	371.829 MIC

	much like a spider's web with complex inter-locking parts. The spider can be seen as the master weaver and builder. When links are broken they are fixed and reconstructed to make it whole. In Chapter 6, reconciliation is discussed as 'a journey' using the metaphor of a herd of caribou moving through the land. Here, the writer is guided by Cree values of 'Wakotowin' (Developing relations), 'Wichitowin' (Helping one another) and 'Sitoskatowin' (Unity). These Cree words are rooted within the northern landscape and reinforce Dr. Michell's worldview and thoughts on reconciliation.
